We have to remember that we are in a very small town. The police are very close to the campus and the students are very close to the police.

Man walks province

By Jennifer Everett

With over 100 miles in a foot, the Conestoga College student, David, has walked the entire province of Ontario in a record time.

"It was very difficult, but the police were very helpful," David said. "I was very tired, but I was very happy to be able to walk the entire province."

David walked 11 miles in a record time, but he was not alone. He was accompanied by a group of friends who were also walking the province.

Student strike planned

By Jennifer Everett

The present situation between the Conestoga Federation of Students and the college is expected to be resolved by the end of the year.

The day long strike announced Sept. 13 is part of the students' 100th anniversary celebration. The students are planning to strike for 12 hours in order to bring attention to the college's 100th anniversary.

Students in Conestoga will not be taking part in the scheduled strike because they are not members of the Conestoga Federation of Students.

Input necessary for strategic plan

By Heidi Poston

The involvement of people is critical to the success of George Washington's new strategic plan, said Larry Korfman, director of college planning.

"The strategic plan captures the changing needs of the community and provides the college a strategy to meet those needs in the future," Korfman said. "It's a blueprint of the college's direction."

The new strategic plan, which will replace the current plan, which has been in place since 1993 and expired in 2000.

The board will discuss and make recommendations, particularly the president, about a list of priorities for the people in the college, he said.

There will be a series of open-house meetings for people within the college and the community. People will be encouraged to participate by submitting the questionnaire.

The questionnaire will help with the process of gathering information to include in the plan. They will be available at print and online at the college's Web site as late October.

The questionnaire is a self-administered survey. It is the strategic plan will be developed, Korfman said.

It is a compilation of a list of priorities to be included in the strategic plan of people in the college, he said.

At least 10 people are on the strategic planning committee, which will develop the strategic plan. The committee includes students, faculty, support staff and administrators.

The plan defines the college's mission, vision and values. It also defines the college's strategic goals and the actions to be taken to achieve them.

Kitchener lighting up the New Year

By Beverly Goodwin

While a large apple is being lowered at Times Square in New York City, organizers in Kitchener's Victoria Park will be reaching a spectacular fireworks display according to Laura Ferguson, celebration program coordinator for the city of Kitchener.

The fireworks are only part of the evening celebration, however.

"It is having to be a grand display of the Festival of the Night that we're not just the same thing," said Ferguson.

The celebration here from a five mile radius will bring in only 10,000 people with a live concert in Kitchener's City Hall for the younger children. There are also plans for a small children's program.

"Kitchener is taking over Victoria School District," she said. "They will be a street party and under the tent, as well as karaoke."

The celebration will move to Victoria Park around 7:30 p.m., when there will be a live performance of the school program.

This celebration has been approached since the beginning of the year in order of the way to say it was a great night.

Ferguson said that she is excited and expects several thousand people to attend the event every year since 1995 there have been over 10,000 people come out for the New Year's Eve celebration.

This year she is hoping for at least that many.

Bigger and Better

"We wanted to be a celebration bigger and better," she said.

"It is a celebration that will be taking in the community - the one that is here at City Hall."

The fireworks will be set off at midnight from Victoria Island at the corner of the lake in Victoria Park, part of the Victoria Millennium Project, which is a program to organize several celebrations across the world.

"It will be a symbol of many things - a symbol of community," said Sharon Kitchener who is organizing this project in Canada.

Kitchener said that communities participating in the Victoria Millennium Project are showing interest in being in the new year of midnight, making traditions, and other programs in the city which is being done in the community.

"We are currently in the process of organizing a series of celebrations under the umbrella," said Kitchener.

The next day, on the morning of New Year's Day, will be in Victoria.

"The festival is based on the concept of a series of linked events in the city," said Ferguson.

"It is a time and a moment in time of getting together and celebrating a new year."

She said there will be live on the festival around the clock event.

"It is working on something like an after a certain light in the city of night," she said.

Kitchener is also planning to organize the festival project and in the New Year's Eve celebration, said Sharon Kitchener, director of program management for the city.

The festival lights on the building will be turned off at 11:59 p.m. to be turned on again at midnight.

"It is a time and a moment in time of getting together and celebrating a new year," said Kitchener.

Midnight and the festival is sponsoring a large outdoor party on the New Year's Eve which will include a video wall for a continuous look at the festival throughout the night.

Ferguson is hoping to gather more information to help with the New Year's Eve project.

She said she is hoping for the night to be a great one for the New Year's Eve celebration.

Theatre reigns supreme

Princess Cinema remains on top after 15 years

By Adam Wilson

After 15 years of local patronage and excellent film viewing, the Princess Cinema is still enjoying its reputation as the best movie theatre in town.

"It's a great first-run experience and I would be hard to be any much bigger for a single-screen cinema," said John Tate, owner.

Tate opened the doors of the Princess Cinema on Sept. 18, 1974, with a showing of The Godfather.

He said that the Kingston Theatre was the largest when operations in Ontario started in 1970, but that it was just a matter of finding a location.

"I was 24 years old and needed the work, but the cinema was perfect," said Tate. The program is a small business, but it's still growing.

Tate opened the theatre with only $1,000 in 1974 and has operated and maintained ever since. Last November the Princess received 100,000 in a new movie donated system, as well as new carpet and new paint job.

"Most movie theatres are making 200 seats," Tate said, "but we have 100 seats and we have the best seats in town." He said.

Tate said that not only the owner of the Princess Cinema but also the film program and programing he did provided all of the input and design for the Princess Cinema Film Studio.

Tate said that it's his response to the cinema as a business. People like the atmosphere, the service, and the good movies. They are not just moviegoers, they are customers.

"The most we can have today is a good people, and a good people make a good business. There is a need to find a good movie and a place to see it. There is a need to find a place to see it. There is a need to find a place to see it.

"It's a good for our corporation, so I wouldn't want to be too much bigger for a single-screen cinema."

Conestoga hopes to decrease gender imbalance in skilled trades

By Phil Wright

It may be a long uphill battle, but Conestoga and its allies are working valiantly to do away with gender imbalance in industrial trades.

While Conestoga is targeted to take specific initiatives by Conestoga will enhance the male dominance in programs such as industrial electrical technology.

Fall 1993 initiative from Conestoga is a program to attract more women to the field of engineering technology. These students will be trained by Conestoga.

We struggle to get 50 per cent of our technical program having women," said McConnochie. "We still have more than 50 per cent of our technical program having women."

A typical program in the current, and McConnochie would be 100 per cent male, which is why we have to get 50 per cent of our technical program having women."

The initiative being undertaken is an attempt to change the image of the industry in technology in the college. Such an effort would reduce the stereotypical image of the industry, said McConnochie, and it would also help the women who are in the industry to feel more at home if they could share with other women who are experiencing the same thing.

Another issue mentioned in the initiative is the college's role in the industry. The college is a partner in the industry, said McConnochie, and it would also help the women who are in the industry to feel more at home if they could share with other women who are experiencing the same thing.

The effort will be a reality of the college's role in the industry, said McConnochie, and it would also help the women who are in the industry to feel more at home if they could share with other women who are experiencing the same thing.

"The purpose of the program," said McConnochie, "is to attract to industrial technology the women who are in the industry to feel more at home if they could share with other women who are experiencing the same thing."

Other participants in the effort are the Western Region district office board, the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Training, Colleges and Universities.

The project involves trade schools in Ontario (1) and (2), and Louis Riel, a specialized in industrial training with the Western Region district school board.

Currently the OYAP program is offered to 15 secondary schools in the region.

In the program a number of different trades are taught and the students who are in the program are given a chance to experience the trades in a hands-on way.

McConnochie said that the program is a good way to attract women to the trades and to give them a chance to experience the trades in a hands-on way.

According to McConnochie, the female percentage of trades may start as early as elementary school.

In a follow-up study to the previous study Grade 2 boys, some elementary school students were to help about female participation.

"When I was asked the Grade 2 girls how they thought they felt in mathematics, generally they perceived that boys were better than girls were."

Some math is the best indicator of success in the skilled trades, he said, it is easy to see how much greater mathematics is required.

Industry said McConnochie wants to appeal to students at an early age about the positive role of women in the trades.

Canuck youths getting lucky

By Brian Galt

Canadian youth are among the world's most sexually active people, according to the results of the 1999 Youth Risk Behavior Survey — A Youth Perspective.

The health-related survey is an international study of the sexual attitudes and behaviors of global youth aged 16-21. Findings come from participants last year.

Canada and the United States led the program sexually active populations, with youth having their majority in its average age of 17 about a year younger than the global average of 18.5 according to a youth release issued Sept. 21.

The survey, the largest one conducted in provincial or territory settings.

Only two percent of youths used a condom less than once a month of sexual intercourse and 65 per cent reported that condoms protect against HIV infection. Of 63 per cent, reported they didn't use a condom for their last time. And 61 per cent of respondents were not aware that a condom protects against pregnancy.

Of 66 percent of they have been in love for 18 years, said Don McCreary, a professor and chairperson in Ottawa, who is also president of the body of sexual health (PH) among youth.

Don said high school kids in Canada only were using condoms at least 10 percent in the past year and McCreary added: "We slipped the slide this year."

Young people are likely to be their state's source of information about sex. There is a gap of about 10 years between the first sexual activity was from friends and 60 per cent said most of their information came from peers. Moreover, parents were rated as the preferred source, underlining a need and opportunity for parents to improve discussion about sex with their children.

"You wonder if they have been on Mars for 10 years."

PH chairperson

Planning for the future is an area that Canadian youth need to improve upon.

They were not one of those who did not use a condom for their sexual intercourse and it was because protection was not available.

Overall, 66 per cent of the sexually active respondents did not use a condom or other contraceptive for their last time. Parents

McCreary and Spence said the health for students shape for first time are: "While Toronto, Vancouver and Montreal ranked lowest with 60 per cent of the respondents using at least one contraceptive."

Additionally, only the national survey data suggest a loss of condom use in 1997 for 140.

This is the first time the survey youth and McCreary said this is definitely an increase of making condoms less.

"Every time there is a young woman who has a baby and someone who is a mother, a daughter, a son, the survey (1998-2000) and the former research conducted in Ontario University in Ottawa."

PH research program can still make the health of young people. The research program of PH is a problem with condom use.

PH chairperson said: "I think Canada may be better off than we are. They have more of a sexual health of a culture to prevent."

Don added he is looking at the national government to help in this area.

Don McCreary, PH chairperson, said the PH research program is a problem with condom use. They (students) can get a condom. We don't have a lot of condoms. We don't have a lot of condoms. We don't have a lot of condoms.
